REYNOLDS RESOURCE GROUP OPENS TO “DO GOOD AND GIVE BACK” TO HELP THOSE MOST IN NEED in MASSACHUSETTS

Osterville/Brookline – (February 5, 2008) – Do good and give back. That’s the mission of Reynolds Resource Group, a new consulting and organizational coaching firm formed with the intent to distribute all profit to support local nonprofit programs and services in Massachusetts. Reynolds Resource Group offers mentoring and consulting services, as well as help finding effective talent, and its profits will go to organizations such as The Salvation Army, Duffy Health Center, and Housing Assistance Corporation. CEO Catherine Reynolds also announced that she is now accepting nonprofit executive search and organizational development assignments.

“Catherine has dedicated many years of hard work to the Salvation Army, and her passion and commitment to the work of nonprofit agencies is unparalleled,” said Thomas Langdon, Director of Community Relations and Development for The Salvation Army in Massachusetts. “Reynolds Resource Group is a tremendous and much-needed initiative, and Catherine is an ideal person to carry out such an important mission.”

Through her contacts with many nonprofit organizations over the years, Reynolds saw their struggles over the lack of funding for needed community programs and services. Not only did she see that many nonprofit organizations face challenges in recruiting talent to their organizations, she recognized that the majority of these organizations did not have an affordable accountability coach or mentor for their employees to help them achieve their aspirations.

With her innate ability to discern organizational and personnel opportunities and issues, Catherine believed that she could effectively provide this scope of services and has launched RRG -- a business that provides exceptional, affordable services and also gives back to the local community.
